Part 3~ Questions 1

"What's the government doing to help low-income people buy their own home?"

"Is the government doing anything to help low-income people buy their own home?"

Possible answers

"I have little thoughts, but if I were the government, I'd build many suitable size, cheaper apartments on the edge of the city where the land is not so limited and which aims to the low-incomes at a relative lower price, possibly even below the cost of construction because, after all, the government doesn't need to worry about making a profit from selling these housing."

Possible answers

I have no idea but, you know, there are loads of solution we could take, after all, the main purpose of a stable government is to look after the interests of the low income people more than the interests of the high incomes. The equality in the society is the most difficult to achieve, but the most pressing. Therefore, providing the accommodation is the first step to fill the gap between rich and poor.

Possible answers

Q: Studying abroad is necessary these days.

A: Studying abroad is generally accepted as a necessary step in the process of gaining higher qualifications these days. The decision means a choice of choosing a different lifestyle, as well as an imposing impact on family and friends. The change itself is the leaner, such as the way of thinking, living and treating others.

Possible answers

Q: The rights and responsibilities of students.

A: well...students need to be respectful and obedient as in the past but today's students are less tolerant of arbitrary rules and regulations... such as the length of their hair for example. They have the right to have their say and to have their right to receive a meaningful and relevant education and to study in a safe and caring environment.
