1.

Nowadays people travel more than before.

Why is this case?

Do you think the advantages of traveling outweigh its disadvantages?

In recent years, with the development of economy, people's income increases sharply. At the same time, the price of traveling decreases rapidly because competition among travel companies is becoming fiercer. Therefore, people travel more than before. Some people hold the opinion that traveling is beneficial for us in many aspects. However there are also a lot of people who strongly advocate that we should not go out for travel frequently. It is quite understandable that people from different backgrounds have different attitudes towards the same issue.

Those who believe that disadvantages of the traveling outweigh its advantages give their reasons as follows. The first reason is that travelers have to spend a large sum of money. It is commonly accepted that traveling lays a heavy financial burden on their families. Another reason is that traveling may be dangerous for travelers. In other words, travelers may be in danger because they are not familiar with the local surroundings.

However, further analysis would make it clear that traveling brings us more advantages. In the first place, traveling is beneficial to people's psychological health. Researches reveal that fresh air and clear water have positive effects on our mental health. In the second place, it can broaden our horizons. It is well known that the knowledge which is acquired in other places helps us to become more open-minded. In addition, we can have opportunities to know different culture and make friends with people from different cultural backgrounds.

In my opinion, the advantages of traveling outweigh its disadvantages. Traveling is conducive to our psychological health. What is more, it can widen our sights.

In some countries, the national traditional arts are facing extinction. Some people think that the government should support them. Do you agree or disagree? What should the government do?

Traditional arts are disappearing far away from the modern society at amazing rate. Some people hold the view that it is the government's responsibility to support them. However, some others point out that there is no need for the government to support traditional arts. Before giving my opinion, it is important to have a look at the two sides of the argument.

There are several reasons why the government should not give support to traditional arts. The first reason is that the government will have to spend a large sum of money. It is commonly accepted that supporting traditional arts will inevitably lay a heavy burden on the government. Another reason is that traditional arts have their own disadvantages. As is known to all, a lot of traditional arts are out of date and lag far behind the times. In addition, some traditional arts contain superstitious, violent and obscene items, which are detrimental to people's psychological health.

However, further analysis would make it clear that the government should support traditional arts. For one thing, traditional arts are national treasures. In other words, they are the precious heritage of our ancestors and it is our duties and obligations to inherit them and carry them down to the next generation. For another thing, traditional arts are the foundation of modern ones. Researches reveal that the development of modern arts depends upon the traditional ones. For example, compared with movie, drama is a traditional art. Many famous movie stars have ever studied in drama institutions.

In my opinion, the government should support traditional arts. Firstly, the government should invest more funds on the research of traditional arts. Secondly, the government should organize activities to promote public awareness of the importance of traditional arts.
